The MaleSurvivor Advanced Weekend of Recovery is approaching soon, and your client (or potentially a new client who will see you after the weekend) has registered for the weekend. At this time, we are asking for your help and support of your client's participation in the weekend. This weekend is unique for us in that it is the first time we are inviting couples to be a part of the weekend. Your client may attend with his partner (or your client may be the partner); or they may attend without the partner or they may not have a partner.

The goals for the Advanced Weekend of Recovery are:

- 1) to enhance your ability to connect with other male survivors, with an intimate partner, with the significant people in your life, and with your own inner experience
- 2) to leave the weekend with practical skills for developing and enhancing the intimacy in your life and working together with a partner to further your healing from the abuse and living effectively;
- 3) To empower yourself to identify psychological, emotional and spiritual blocks to your healing process and to take significant steps in removing at least one of those blocks
- 4) To increase the awareness and understanding of the impact of abuse on building and enhancing intimacy

If you would like to view our site which more fully describes the weekend, you can visit it at <http://www.malesurvivor.org> There will be a link on the home page which you can click on to get information about the Advanced Weekend.

For the facilitator team at MaleSurvivor, safety is our number one priority throughout the weekend. One way we work toward this is to have a 1:3 staff to participant ratio. Staff members are licensed mental health professionals, with a minimum of 5 years experience working with male survivors. Most of our staff has 20 or more years of experience. Small groups are used throughout the weekend, and are kept small (no more than 8 men in a group), and are always facilitated by two therapists experienced in providing group therapy. Another way we work toward this goal is by having one facilitator interview each registrant before the weekend to learn about their recovery, what they have done so far, what their expectations are, kinds of treatment they are currently pursuing, and what they are aware of for themselves in terms of needs for safety.

While the weekend itself is not an alternative to psychotherapy, we have found many participants bring what they learn at the weekend back home to utilize in their personal therapy and recovery work. The weekend is highly experiential: we do a lot of personal sharing. In addition, in this advanced workshop, we will be using body empowerment, art work, improvisational movement, and gestalt sculpting, cognitive behavioral work, meditations and visualizations to help participants access their feelings and take steps toward reclaiming their bodies, their feelings, and their lives.

In our registration materials, we recommend all participants are currently seeing a mental health professional, or have an appointment to see someone upon their return from the weekend. If the person is in therapy, we recommend they discuss their planned participation with the therapist to get as much feedback and suggestions for how they can benefit from the weekend of recovery while keeping themselves as safe as they need to be.

As an additional way to help protect all of the participants' safety, we are asking any therapist who is working with a survivor to complete the form below which indicates you have discussed the weekend with your client, you feel comfortable supporting their participation, and you are willing to provide follow-up with them following the weekend. Specific areas of concern for us which could seriously change your willingness to support their participation could include: 1) active suicidal ideation and plan; 2) active chemical dependency with no ability to remain sober; 3) inability to control perpetrating behaviors, such as an inability to respect other people's physical and sexual boundaries; or 4) unstable psychotropic drug regimen. It is important for your client to be able to ask for help, and we will do our best to remove as many barriers as we can so the asking is as comfortable as possible.

Being mindful of HIPAA regulations, and in respect for the privacy of our participants, we are not asking you to disclose any clinical information about your client, except any information which your client has agreed for you to release to us for the purpose of helping to facilitate as positive an experience for them at the weekend. Safety concerns are our most important concern.
